During early November, more than 2,000 former officers, students and civil servants were arrested by the Bucharest Militia. Some of those arrested were released soon afterwards, but others were detained in the various security offices, particularly on Calea Rahovei, at the apartment of Draganir Niculescu, and the Palais Crepulescu. A number of those arrested were also sent to various concentration camps for "voluntary work" in the newly formed "reconstruction brigades."
